

ABSTRACT
for
METHOD AND SYSTEM FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF SUBSCRIBER FUNCTIONS

The present invention relates to a method and system for the management of subscriber functions in a digital telephone exchange. According to the invention, the functions for default subscribers are stored in and read from default records common to the subscribers, and only the functions for special subscribers are stored in and read from subscriber-specific records. The invention allows significantly faster execution of operations applying to subscriber functions.